artist bio

lund's musical journey actually started with a Music Industries Studies degree — with a concentration in vocal performance — from Appalachian State University. Suffice to say, she "knows her shit." "My voice professor was an opera singer," says lund with a grin. "I sang every spiritual I could to avoid opera." Her passion and training are evident on the Nina Simone-derived psych-soul of "Don't You Leave Me," the grungy swirl of "Paper Tiger," and her subtle self-harmonizing on the title track. On this eclectic stroll through American musical styles, lund's clarion voice is the tie that binds.

lund's debut album "Right This Time," was recorded with producer Tyler "The Falcon" Greenwell (TedeschiTrucks Band) at Echo Mountain Studios and Sedgwick Studios in her adoptive hometown of Asheville, NC. The album features original songs honed over her decades-long stint in New York City as a working musician, promoter and manager. lund's debut album "Right This Time" was released on Friday, September 9th, 2022.
